

Schlesinger as well. General Alexander Haig, the Rockefeller-CIA insider in the Nixon administration, is being asked to remain as Chief of Staff — though the cabal may have plans for him in the field.

Also, just as von Papen rescinded the ban on Hitler's stormtroopers, the SA, shortly after taking power — at once unleashing political terror not seen since the early days of the Weimar Republic — the Rockefeller gang is planning as soon as politically feasible to turn the CIA and the FBI completely loose on society. The carefully drawn-up Section Five of the Judiciary Committees' impeachment Article 2 against Nixon, declaring the CIA and FBI independent of the President, was designed to flee these para-military "Super Agencies" to accomplish for Rockefeller what the SA did for Krupp and Farben.

Losing Leverage

In spite of these obvious gains, the Rockefeller-CIA forces are far from having things wrapped up. In fact, entering a period of exacerbated economic instability and accompanying labor unrest, in certain important ways they have lost leverage.

Without Richard Nixon to kick around anymore, the cabal no longer has a convenient Herbert Hoover to scapegoat for the Rockefeller-engineered economic collapse. While trying to shove their fascist economic program down the throats of a resistant working class, the Rockefeller gang will have to offer a new explanation for the failure of the government to be able to effectively deal with skyrocketing inflation and unemployment. The cabal, after a suitable period of fanfare for the "glories of democracy" and the "wonders of constitutional government," supposedly demonstrated by the removal of Nixon, will have to switch their line sharply. The problem turns out to be, they will announce, that bourgeois democracy simply doesn't work! But, before the cabal does its about-face on the question of democratic government, the Labor Committees will have briefed millions of workers on the real nature of the new political order to be organized under the "National Unity" cover of the Ford administration.

The Labor Committees and the U. S. Labor Party, establishing undisputed hegemony in the labor movement, will shake the working class out of its temporary shell-shocked state over the decapitation of the presidency. Spreading the message "Stop Rockefeller Now!" through all pores of the class, the revolutionary vanguard will catalyze and lead a mass working-class movement as Rockefeller and his disorganized agents in the labor movement are still bound by their phony "constitutional national unity government" cover.

Nixon on Economy: 'Nothing We Can Do'

AUGUST 10 (IPS) — Carrying the "Hooverization" of Nixon to its ridiculous extreme, several U. S. newspapers printed an exchange between Nixon and Haldeman on the international monetary crisis taken from the recently released June 23, 1072 White House tape.

The newspapers' purpose in highlighting this excerpt is to hammer home Nixon's ignorance of world finance. While the tape does reveal that Nixon's grasp of economics was indeed weak, the real irony — which the papers fail to note — is that throughout his presidential term Nixon never had any control whatsoever over U.S.

or international financial matters. Global economic management — and collapse — can be laid squarely at the door of Nelson and David Rockefeller.

[E.g. Haldeman: "You want a run-down (on the floating of the British pound)?" Nixon: "No, I don't... It's too complicated for me to get into."]]

Perhaps Nixon had an unconscious inkling of this when he responded to Haldeman's report that Britain had just floated the pound by saying: "I don't care about it. Nothing we can do about it."
