IPS EXCLUSIVE REPORT ON WASHINGTON IMF MEETING

WORKING CLASS REPRESENTATIVES
BREAK UP FASCIST FINANCE ORGY

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 5 (IPS)--Billed as capitalism's yearly witches' Sabbath, this week's annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank was constructed by the Rockefeller faction of international capital as a controlled aversive environment for the rank and file of the ruling class, to prepare them for rodent-like assaults on the world's workers and farmers.

Representatives of the Labor Committee's International Press Service (IPS) were also present at the IMF blowout, which was attended by over 1,000 social cripples from the capitalist world's banks and finance ministries.

Delegates from 126 countries were secluded in the Rockefeller-owned Park-Sheraton, a suburban luxury hotel where top Rockefeller lieutenants--U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon, IMF top dog Johannes Witteveen, and World Bank president Robert McNamara--strutted before their lower ranking colleagues.

The IPS reporters present, identifying themselves as the representatives of the working-class forces which will end Rockefeller's psychotic rampage, sent an unbroken ripple of hysteria through the enemy camp. Bewildered bankers, including ex-IMF chief Pierre-Paul Schweitzer, morbidly bought copies of New Solidarity and the Labor Party's Brief to Congress on Rockefeller's financial and political empire.

Overheard in conversation, top New York Times economics reporter Edwin Dale indicated why the representatives of the CIA-controlled press failed to convey the contents of the meeting in their dispatches. "On Monday, Wednesday, and Friday," Dale moaned, "I wake up certain that the world economy is about to collapse; and on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, things don't seem too bad."

"More for the Third World...."

--previously exposed in New Solidarity--for implementing John D. Rockefeller III's intention to reduce the world's population by one billion. Hair plastered down with grease and face locked in a manic grin, McNamara told the IPS reporters in a Park-Sheraton corridor: "We're doing more for the third world than anyone else." Agreeing, the IPS reporters told him that he was indicted under the Nuremburg statutes governing crimes against humanity. The former Ford Motor Co. president, U.S. Defense Secretary, and present mass murderer teetered toward hysteria, grabbed a copy of New Solidarity, and rushed off.

In Rocky's Park-Sheraton environment, however, McNamara went unchallenged before the shell-shocked delegates from Asia, Africa, and Latin America, whose countries the World Bank proposes to depopulate. German Finance Minister Hans Apel coyly told reporters that he was "surprised there was little opposition" to the McNamara-Rockefeller murder plans.

McNamara's plans for the cannibalization of approximately one billion people in the underdeveloped sector fed directly into the broader strategic attack on the working class of North America, Western Europe, and Japan that was the central thrust of the entire meeting. "Affluent nations" (i.e., working class) he warned, "may have to accept for the time being some selective reduction in their already immensely high standard of living" if the world's poor countries are not to face the "risk of death."

Rockefeller stooge Simon baldly outlined the specifics of the attack. He announced that the working class would be asked to finance Rocky's oil crisis-induced balance of payments deficits through a cut in oil consumption in the range of 15 per cent. Simon, however, broke down when he was told by IPS that a spokesman for Chase Manhattan Bank had stated: "Simon tows David Rockefeller's line." In response, Simon had a fit of anger and hysteria.

Simon was not upset by the identification with the Rockefeller cabal, a connection of which he is proud. Indeed, at Simon's IMF press conference he revealed the "informal" relationship his office maintains with Rocky's fascist Trilateral Commission. What upset him was the correct imputation that he is not allowed to write his own speeches. Chase had emphasized in an earlier discussion with IPS that Simon's economic policy speech the previous week was a mere transcription of David Rockefeller's Sept. 16 speech to Canadian bankers, previously reported by IPS.

There is no question that these subhumans are well-prepared to shove their own grandmothers into the gas ovens, in their determination to make the human race pay for Rockefeller's worthless paper empire. As Johannes Witteveen, the IMF's Managing Director put it: "the political will of the national authorities is apt to be severely tested" by Rockefeller's demands for a $50 per week slave wage for industrial workers. Italian finance minister Emilio Colombo, the engineer of food shortages and epidemics in his own country, bluntly added: "For the first time in a generation, governments may not be able to satisfy people's expectation for a continuing improvement in living standards, with the risks of serious repercussions in the social and economic stability of many countries."

The defect of these mercenaries is that they have no guts. German finance minister Hans Apel blew his cool at a press conference Oct. 3, when IPS asked this question: did he not believe, given the left turn of the European Communist parties, the growing influence of the European Labor Committees, and the collapse of the Italian government, that European workers would meet any attempt to put through the IMF's fascist policies with a mass strike wave? Apel spent several moments trying in vain to form words. Then he fell silent, utterly disoriented by this breath from the real world.

Meanwhile, the IPS team briefed scattered reporters from the European and Soviet press. Italian reporters, in particular, were sufficiently awake to the horror that awaits European workers to stock up on International Caucus of Labor Committees documentation. At the last IMF meeting, the June session of that body's Committee of Twenty on Monetary Reform, European reporters circulated IPS-planted rumors of an Italian debt moratorium in their dispatches at home.

A bundle of 50 copies of New Solidarity, left discreetly on an IMF literature table, disappeared within an hour, and some bankers were observed stumbling over chairs as they read the exposure of their crimes.

Conference Decisions

What emerged from the conference were a set of hollow shells of supranational institutions to direct the construction of the Fourth Reich. An "Interim Committee" of 20 finance ministers, headed up by Canada's finance chief John Turner, will take responsibility for the "surveillance" of national economies during the coming months of economic war and re-structuring. As Turner expressed the committee's aim, its principal task is to mobilize political support from each national sector for the internationally coordinated austerity demands of the IMF.

In addition, a joint committee of the IMF and the World Bank on the "transfer of real resources to developing countries" will attempt to centralize the flow of credit to Rocky's development-project hellholes.
