

TRILATERAL'S ECONOMIC PSYWAR AGAINST SOVIETS OUT IN OPEN

Dec. 10 (IPS)--The Trilateral Commission's stepped-up economic psychological warfare maneuvers against the Soviet Union and the East bloc are now out in the open. The Reesian choice--"cooperation" with the West in Rocky's "New World Order" or no more credit and collapse as a result of the capitalist crisis--was first put to the Soviets personally at the mid-November private East-West trade meeting in Vienna.

The secret Vienna conference brought together top Trilateral Commission agents for the West. Fiat's Agnelli, Krupp chairman Ernst W. Mommsen, French President Giscard d'Estaing, and Britain's Lord Caradon, as well as OPEC representatives, were in attendance. The U.S. delegation, peopled with various members of Rocky's Critical Choices Commission, was led by Trilateral Commission member and top-level Anglo-American cabal agent George Ball.

Last week, almost a month after the conference, the influential London financial daily, the Financial Times, mentioned the pivotal Vienna meeting, focusing their coverage on the proposal for a three-way trade bank based on "equal" participation by the Soviet Union, the West, and Chase Manhattan's towel boys in OPEC that was fielded at that meeting. The Soviets rejected the proposal at the time.

Subsequently, the West German daily Die Welt, part of the right-wing Axel Springer publishing empire, carried a feature article exemplifying the psywar quality of this offensive. Headlined "Crisis-Fear in Comecon," the article trumpets the grave threat the capitalist economic crisis represents to East bloc nations because the "world economic involvement of the Comecon states is greater than Communist functionaries either say is true or would like to admit."

Die Welt then quotes Hungarian officials concerning their admonitions to their East bloc comrades to pay heed to the crisis in the West. "Most clear on this point," according to Die Welt, is the Hungarian national bank's vice-president, who has urgently warned the Comecon states against "being apathetic about the difficulties of the capitalist countries."

The choice of Hungary as a spokesman for the East bloc is no accident. Hungary's compliance with the Rockefeller strategy of undermining the Warsaw pact through selective and persistent economic and "cultural" penetration of the more vulnerable East bloc nations is notorious--together with Czechoslovakia and Poland, Hungary has taken the lead in offering Rockefeller a red carpet through joint-venture and related "co-participation" economic projects.
