

propaganda" conspiracy in lies, are supposed to accept the idea that these key news media control and represent "mass public opinion."

As long as honest Federal and State officials believe that the criminal press is able to control public opinion, such Federal and State officials believe themselves to be helpless to fight against the subversion of Constitutional government. They believe that they are hopelessly isolated and weak.

Then, the criminals within the executive branches and the legislators go to work on them, waving newspaper clippings from the lying press in their faces, and adding a few bits of blackmail threats of one kind or another. At that point, under that pressure, the typical, otherwise well-meaning legislator or other official cracks. He does as he is told, or simply keeps silent, letting the nation and government go straight to Hell.

There is a simple technique for putting an end to that criminal business. It is the technique of "encircling" the lying press and lying criminals in the legislatures and executive. A sufficiently massive outpouring of individual and group opinion from the honest local and regional press, with backup of a massive direct communication by ordinary working people to their legislatures and to the White House will break the back of the campaign of lies by the New York Times and Washington Post.

The use of a tame whore as part of an attack on Constitutional government is the obvious point for an effective counterattack.

You are not supporting Hays' possible indiscretions. You are defending your own lives and liberties by telling the White House and Congress that your mind is not controlled by the lying Washington Post or any other rag of that type.

The Rockefeller-Fabian Drive To Dismantle The U.S. Congress And The Constitution

June 20 (NSIPS) — The "sex and scandal" operation aimed at the U.S. Congress and ordered by Vice President Nelson Rockefeller escalated last week into a full scale insurrection against the Congress and the U.S. Constitution. While Rockefeller's press whores led by "Madam" Katherine Graham's Washington Post have tried and convicted at least 16 Congressmen and one Senator on anything from sex with secretaries to illegal use of travel expenses over the past three weeks, the kingpin of the Nazi justice apparatus, Attorney General Edward Levi, acknowledged last Friday that he is prepared to tear up the U.S. Constitution itself in order to bust the Congress. The Levi-press assault on the U.S. Constitution, which makes the "Blomberg-Fritsch" affair set up by Goering and used the Nazis look mild, was joined last week by a chorus on "intelligence community" agents within the Congress calling for Congressional reforms which would target for removal any congressman who does not obey Rockefeller orders.

The wheels that have been set in motion and the arms and legs carrying out orders represent the body of an active conspiracy to overthrow the U.S. Constitution underway since 1963. It represents the same machinery used to "Watergate" and drive from office former President Richard Nixon. Directly involved in the entire Fabian network inside and outside the Congress including the Institute for Policy Studies and related private Rockefeller spy outfits. Inside Congress, Institute creations such as Rep. Toby Moffett (D-Conn), Michael Harrington (D-Mass) and John Conyers (D-Mich) play central roles in the conspiracy. Also in Congress, long time Fabian agents in the Democratic Study Group (founded in 1957 by CIA agent Eugene McCarthy) such as Rep. Frank Thompson (D-NJ) (Wayne Hays' replacement as Chairman of the House Administration Committee), Tip O'Neill (D-Mass) and Phil Burton (D-Cal) have surfaced as instrumental in the current insurrection. Sen. Henry Jackson (D-Wash) and his Permanent Investigations Committee in the Senate, which maintains dossiers on every congressman, are directly implicated in both the operation against Congress and in a corruption attack directed against the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. Beyond Edward Levi and his Justice Department, the press led by Graham's Post, the Sulzbergers' New York Times and the Associated Press wire service are directly indictable for their role in the conspiracy.

The conspiracy's immediate targets in the House of Representatives reveal the purpose of the insurrection — the final obliteration of Constitutionally defined politics in the United States. At stake is the future of constituency-based politics. The aim of the insurrection is to crush this central feature of representative democracy in order to open the door for a 1984 fascist model in which all representatives of the population are forced to obey no other voice but that of Wall Street. Rep. Wayne Hays has been so villified and crucified because as Chairman of the House Administration Committee he has authorized expenditures since 1970 which have given the House wide-ranging "oversight" powers and the staff capability to exercise those powers.

Rockefeller-Fabians Escalate Insurrection

Identifying the purpose behind the two-week long barrage of congressional scandals and the central role of "Madam" Graham's Washington Post in pursuing them with a vengeance, Adam Lampham, writing in the recent issue of New Yorker Magazine, gleefully spouts, "he (Rep. Hays) compromised many reforms set in motion by the Watergate scandals. Now appropriately, the Watergate newspaper (the Washington Post) which brought down the Watergate President has gone far toward bringing down the man who defied the lessons of Watergate. In this context, the Hays scandal is more than a sex scandal. It is a Watergate mop-up."

On Wednesday, the Watergate newspaper in its lead editorial issued marching orders to the Rockefeller-Fabian forces to initiate the second phase of its attempt to mop up the Congress and the Constitution. Urging their Fabian co-conspirators in the Congress to "get on with it," the Post proposed the setting up of an internal policing apparatus in Congress which could be used to crucify any U.S. congressman who steps out of line. On cue, Attorney General Levi reported through the offices of the U.S. Attorney for Washington, D.C. Silbert on Friday that the Justice Department was reviewing Article I, Section 6 of the U.S. Constitution which provides for Congressional immunity.

In conjunction with late week press-Justice Department moves, Institute for policy Studies congressmen centered in the 81 member House Freshman Caucus staged a press-conference on Wednesday and demanded that their congressional elders begin policing themselves. Rep. Toby Moffett (D-Conn), intimate of Marcus Raskin and a congressman in residence at the CIA's Airlie House, led the charge, demanding that the Congressional staffers be offered the opportunity to turn in their bosses. Among other proposals, Moffett called for the creation of a citizens panel to watchdog Congress. On Friday an aide to Moffett gleefully revealed that the Institute's errand boys will not unveil all their reforms until the right moment: "You know, the politics and the timing is very important — the climate is ripe."

Simultaneously, the House Democratic Caucus announced that it will meet this Wednesday to decide on three reforms aimed at stripping the House of the increased funding that Hays had won over a six year period. The Caucus leaders, Reps. John Burton (D-Cal) and Tip O'Neill (D-Mass), the House Majority Leader, are both long term members of the Democratic Study Group, a Fabian operation in the Congress for the explicit purpose of pushing reforms that would subvert Congressional authority and remove the powers of constituency-based congressmen.

The press targeting of Congressmen was simultaneously escalated. While Wayne Hays' was resigning from the chairmanship of the House Administration Committee two days ago, the Justice Department asked the House for the financial records of nine more congressmen who allegedly received Federal travel funds illegally. Prior to that, Rep. Joe Waggoner (D-Fla) and Charles Vanik (D-Oh) became the new victims of the continuing sex scandals.

Constituency Politics the Target

In Saturday's Washington Post, in an article authored by Pincus and Stern, the immediate intention of the insurrectionary forces is announced. Pincus, a former editor of the Fabian New Republic and an admitted "former" CIA press detailee, and Stern who roams within the orbit of the Institute and is connected with the Institute's press clearing house, the Fund for Investigative Journalism, urged that the House Administration Committee "empire" be dismantled. Since 1970, the House of Representatives has grown tremendously in size measured by the number of professional staff and the number of Committees. The staffing of Congress is estimated to be 300 per cent greater since Wayne Hays' tenure as Chairman of the Administration Committee began six years ago. The most significant result of Hays' Committee work is that the House has more subcommittees than the Senate and, importantly, subcommittees that can establish "oversight" jurisdiction in many areas. Under Hays' tenure, the House has received the necessary funding to become a formidable oversight body, and thus has become a more adequate representative of constituency demands.

It was precisely this point that CIA agent and Fabian spokesman Eugene McCarthy stressed in a recent interview: "The House has too many committees and too much oversight." The Post escalated on this theme in its Saturday edition by going after Rep. John Gaydos (D-Pa) for double staffing. Gaydos is Chairman of the House Administration Committee's Subcommittee on Contracts which maintains liaison with other Federal agencies such as the FBI, CIA, etc., and is a nexus point of the House's oversight capabilities.

The Justice Department's targeting of aging chairman of the House Rules Committee Madden (D-Ind), who will not be seeking another term, for illegal use of Federal travel funds is aimed at totally terrifying him into insuring that there is no resistance from the Rules Committee to suggested reforms aimed at dismantling the House Administration Committee and the Congress. The new Chairman of the House Administration Committee is expected to lead the drive for "reforms." Rep. Frank Thompson (D-NJ) is a long time associate of the "intelligence community" and one of the founders of the Democratic Study Group along with McCarthy.

While agents in place in the Congress move in coordination with the press and the Justice Department towards dismantling the Congress, the other targets of the "congressional exposés" are all representatives of anti-Rockefeller power bastions. Joe Waggoner (D-La) has been the central figure in the congress and Democratic Party in organizing a counterweight to the Democratic Study Group. Waggoner, a staunch Southern conservative, has attempted to build a Southern conservative block and is considered the leading spokesman for that layer. (Others targeted in the Southern layer have been Reps. Otto Passman (D-La), Robert Jones (D-Ala), John Young (D-Tex) and Bill Burlison (D-Mo). Two leading fighters against the Watergate proceedings against former President Nixon, Rep. Walter Flowers (D-Ala) and Margaret Heckler (R-Mass), have been victimized. Heckler is also a strong Ford supporter, as is another scandal target, Rep. Tim Lee Carter (R-Ky).

Congress Targeted to Get the Teamsters

While the constituency-based layers of Congress were thoroughly harassed, agent layers in the Congress have geared up for a full scale assault on the independent Teamsters union. With Rockefeller stooge Sen. Jake "the Rake" Javits opening up hearings this week into alleged stalling on the part of the Labor Department-Justice Department joint investigation into Teamster mishandling of pension funds, Rep. John Vanik, Chairman of the House Ways and Means Subcommittee on Oversight (this subcommittee has oversight over the Teamsters) became yet another victim of the congressional "sex and scandal" operation, as the press charged him with paying an office salary to an alleged prostitute currently residing in Los Angeles. Vanik joined Rep. Henry Helstoski (D-NJ), already under grand jury indictment for allegedly accepting a bribe from an illegal alien. Both men have been blocking attempts by Rep. J.J. Pickle (D-Tex) also on the Oversight committee to investigate the Internal Revenue Service's investigation of the Teamsters' Central pension fund. Pickle has charged that the IRS has wittingly stalled its investigation. Helstoski, closely linked to the Teamsters, was set up for indictment by Sen. Henry Jackson (D-Wash) and Jackson's Permanent Investigations Committee which maintains files and dossiers on every congressman. Jackson's aides set up a meeting between Helstoski and a Chilean underworld figure. Two days after the meeting, Fund for Investigative Journalism columnist Jack Anderson ran headlines charging that Helstoski met with a Mafia figure to plot murder.

Working Class and Teamster Mobilizations To Create Environment for Congressional Fight

Speaking at a press conference in Chicago two days ago, Rep. Martin Russo (D-Ill), a long-time associate of Chicago's Mayor Richard Daley, charged that the witch-hunt against Hays is an outrage, and that Hays had been tried and convicted by the press. Russo ended by calling for a return to the U.S. Constitution and due process. Russo's open call for a congressional fight against the insurrectionists was echoed by broader layers of mainstream Ford Republicans and independent Democrats late last week. Rep. Howe's office (D-Utah) reported that they believed that the attacks on the Congress were a concerted conspiratorial effort. While many offices took extended briefings on the nature of the conspiracy and how to fight it from U.S. Labor Party representatives, congressional offices will be studying Labor Party evidence identifying the Institute for Policy Studies as the NSC coordinating body of terror and the assault on the Constitution over this weekend.

In concert with Russo's call and mass working class support, the Congress will go into session next week knowing that Rep. Howe, a target of the scandals, obtained overwhelming support at the Utah Democratic Convention. Howe, at the Convention stated that the attacks on him were politically motivated and charged that the press had already convicted him — completely by-passing the U.S. Constitution.

Leads for Investigation

Outside of the leads for investigation already established in this report, the following bear follow-up.

* The mother of Colleen Gardner, Mrs. Casseta, has top security clearance with the Pentagon. She is also the legal counsel for the Organization of American States' Human Rights Subdivision on Women, and in that capacity launched an investigation into the former Director of the OAS, Luis Rechui, for allegedly forcing sexual favors from the Human Rights Staff of the OAS. He has subsequently resigned.

* Both Howe and Waggoner were allegedly picked up by Police Sexual Perversion Squads in Salt Lake City and Washington D.C. respectively. There are indications that these squads were set up by the Rockefeller-created International Association of Chiefs of Police.

* Stanley Lundeen, Rep. from Jamestown, N.Y., was the Mayor of Jamestown and the head of the Trist-Javits created Jamestown Labor-Management Project — a model for slave labor corporatism. He replaced former Rep. James F. Hastings, who suddenly left office in mid-term. Hastings, who at the time of his resignation gave religious reasons for his departure, was in fact the victim of blackmail involving alleged "sex scandals."

* The Coalition to End Grand Jury Abuse — The Coalition is headed by National Lawyers Guild member David Rein. Its leaders are Fred Solowey, Rep. John Conyers (D-Mich) (who is leading the fight for the Coalition's bill in Congress along with fellow Institute agent Robert Kastenmeir (D-Wisc)), Bella Abzug, Leonard Boudin, Noam Chomsky, Ramsey Clark, Ron Dellums, Frank Donner, Don Edwards, Richard Falk (an Institute for Policy Studies associate), Mike Gravel, Rep. Michael Harrington, Benjamin Spock, and others. While couched in appealing clauses, the bill would actually set up a national star chamber apparatus on the state, municipal, and Federal levels. Any citizen complaint against public officials could be used as the basis of a grand jury investigation.

* Sen. Jacob Javits — While the senior senator from New York has so far escaped the otherwise seemingly omniscient press scrutiny of Congressional sex activities, knowledgeable Capitol Hill insiders report his office lies at the center of a NATO-run call girl ring, used for both blackmail and other NATO business purposes, which figures heavily in the current scandals.
