

What Carter Must Tell Begin

There is one simple way for President Carter to win a major political victory at his meeting with Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat and to secure American interests in a Middle East peace.

The President must tell Mr. Begin that in the American view Israel has two options. First, it must announce its willingness to make the necessary concessions, including the withdrawal from the occupied territories and the establishment of a homeland for the Palestinians on the West Bank and Gaza, and to halt its support for the fascist Christian forces in Lebanon.

Second, if Israel refuses that proposal, then it must be prepared to face American calls for the immediate resumption of a Geneva conference with the presence of the Soviet Union and the Palestinians, along with all the Arab countries involved.

If the Israelis choose not to accept either option, then the United States must tell Israel that it will lose American support, including military and economic support. It is bitter medicine, but it is for Israel's own good. The eventual result of such diplomacy will not only be the establishment of peace in the region, but a renaissance of the Near East in a flourishing economic community in which Israel, finally will play an important role.

Zionist Lobby Plans Rerun Of 1973 Arab-Israeli War, Oil Embargo

Political chaos to follow Carter Camp David decision

President Carter has capitulated to political blackmail from U.S.-based Zionists and their British controllers and, in his Middle East diplomacy, set the stage for a rerun of the 1973-74 scenario for an Arab-Israeli war, an oil embargo, and worldwide political and economic chaos.

The decision to call for a tripartite summit meeting on Sept. 5 at Camp David among Carter, Menachem Begin and Anwar Sadat represents a virtual cold coup by the Mondale-Brzezinski faction of the Administration. It follows an unprecedented wave of political warfare by the Zionist Lobby against the Administration, led by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee "Zionist mafia" of Senators Javits, Case, Stone, and Church.

The Camp David summit tactic was decided upon during a July 31 meeting among Carter, Mondale Brzezinski, and Vance. There, Carter wrote out by hand two letters, one for Begin and one for Sadat. Vance, who probably had deep reservations about the idea, had no choice but to deliver the letters on his Middle East tour.

The battle is now on for the control of the U.S. Administration Middle East policy. The Zionists have set into motion all their forces behind an attempt to prevent the Administration from demanding, at Camp David, that Israel accept the principle of a Palestinian homeland on the West Bank. Meanwhile, the Egyptians and Saudis, along with the State Department, are portraying the Camp David summit as Israel's "last chance" to rise to the quality of the Sadat initiative and make peace.

An enormous amount is at stake. A peace settlement in the Middle East is an essential precondition for the successful implementation of the plan put forward by French President Giscard and West German Chancellor Schmidt at the Bremen EEC Summit last month for the worldwide economic development and financial stability. A peaceful Middle East is the cornerstone for stable energy and financial arrangements à la Bremen, which aims to replace the International Monetary Fund and the City of London speculators and financial vultures associated with the British-centered branch of the Knights of Malta.
