

the San Francisco branch of Circl-PAC, marched in the freakish "Lesbian and Gay Freedom Day" June 29, held in opposition to Proposition 64.

Log Cabin and Circl-PAC are reported to control 20% of the seats on the Central Committee of the GOP. Given all this, it is not entirely unbelievable that communists involved in the "No To Prop 64" operation in Los Angeles report that Decker's circle—and not the Democratic homosexual apparatus—is providing the "big money" to finance the anti-Proposition 64 effort in the state.

Lesser of two evils is still evil

On Sept. 19, a rearguard effort to block this lower-sexual-class power bloc in the Republican Party was made by state leader H. L. Richardson, at a press conference in Sacramento. Richardson announced that he would not endorse Zschau in his Senate race because of "his position on abortion, and other issues." He added "choosing the lesser of two evils is still evil." Zschau is running against Sen. Alan Cranston.

Richardson's announcement grabbed press headlines on Sept. 24 when Republican state chairman Claire Burgener attacked him for this move. The Herald Examiner reported that Richardson's real concern is that Zschau "will let the Log Cabin Club run the entire Republican Party." Zschau had been closely linked in his Senate campaign to David Packard, of Hewlett Packard, who recently chaired the Packard Commission on reorganizing U.S. defense.

The long-term problem of communist sponsorship and manipulation of the "homosexual movement"—dating from at least since the formation of the "Bachelors for Henry Wallace" organization in 1948—with its potential for espionage and blackmail, should form the background for any estimate of this situation in California.

On Sept. 10, the state chairman of the California Communist Party, Kendra Alexander, boasted that the CP is now "mobilizing its influence against Proposition 64, in a broad coalition with the Democrats and Governor Deukmejian," as part of its mobilization against Reaganism, and apartheid, and to repel right-wing attacks on Senator Cranston. She also declared, "The Communist Party absolutely opposes Proposition 64 as a fascist-like measure. We are actively participating in all coalitions. This is an official decision of the party."

The shocking extent of the Gaystapo's penetration of the Republican Party can be traced, starting in Decker's Los Angeles, where a communist-led gang of the lower sexual classes, calling itself the "Alliance Against LaRouche (AAL)," surfaced on Sept. 15, to announce plans for a "militant moving picket-line" of up to 300, outside the office of Proposition 64 supporters. AAL is being headed by one Franz Martin.

Martin and leaders of two similar militant gangs, are former leaders of the "Lavender and Red Union," a self-avowed "communist gay liberation" gang, that was active in Los Angeles from the 1960s until three years ago. Despite the effort to run them at arms length, it has been established that the three gangs are operating under the umbrella of both the Republican-dominated and Democratic-controlled "big money coalitions" that oppose Prop 64: the "No on 64/Stop LaRouche" coalition, and "No To LaRouche" coalition, respectively. Because the two coalitions share the same offices in both Los Angeles and San Francisco, a better way of defining the distinctions among these groups, is by tracking cash flows.

One of the militant gangs, the "Stop AIDS Quarantine Committee (SAQC)," held a torchlight march of 3,000 members of the lower sexual classes to the Prop 64 office on Sept. 15. A third gang, "The Lavender Left (LL)," is now agitating in Los Angeles for a "militant protest movement, similar to the Stonewall/Christopher Street Gay Rebellion," in New York City's Greenwich Village, which signaled the launching of the "Gay Liberation" insurgency movement in the late 1960s.

SAQC's rally was addressed by Rabbi Allen Freehling, the former Los Angeles chairman of the American Jewish Committee, and currently the spokesman for the Los Angeles "Interfaith Council" opposing Prop 64. SAQC was also

More British medical experts back Prop. 64

Dr. Adrian Rogers of Exeter, the Medical Adviser to the Conservative Family Campaign, a lobbying group on pro-Christian moral issues which is associated with 12-15 Members of Parliament, on Sept. 22 became the second prominent British physician, along with Dr. John Seale of London, to explicitly endorse California Proposition 64.

Dr. Rogers made the following statement on the California proposition, which would add AIDS to the list of reportable communicable diseases. "The sponsors of this initiative must win, because this will become a useful precedent for us here in Britain. One would support this initiative, both on basic medical grounds, and on basic humanitarian grounds. We have failed to get AIDS declared a notifiable disease here in Britain, and, if this wins in California, we will have a better chance of doing that here."

Earlier in September, Dr. Rogers had written a report to the British Health Ministry, calling on the government to implement basic health measures, including isolation, for AIDS carriers and victims.
