

The War and Genocide Lobby Go Haywire in Washington

by Jeffrey Steinberg

During his June 2002 visit to São Paulo, Brazil, Lyndon LaRouche issued a dramatic warning about a very likely financial and monetary catastrophe before the end of the Summer, which, in turn, could trigger new military adventures and wars in the September-October 2002 time frame.

A review of recent events backs up LaRouche's forecast:

- While the so-called Argentine monetary crisis is already spreading into Brazil and other parts of Ibero-America, the actual epicenter of the systemic global financial collapse is the United States itself. The U.S. dollar is collapsing against other major currencies, because international investors no longer have confidence in the ability of the United States to maintain world stability, or to reverse the accelerating physical collapse of the U.S. economy. Recent U.S. government figures show that the United States is bankrupt, with a total of $32 trillion in combined government, corporate, and household debt, against a Gross Domestic Product of $10 trillion. Approximately 72% of the entire U.S. GDP goes to servicing the $32 trillion debt bubble.

- Around the globe, there are simmering conflicts which, unless stopped, will trigger a new, worldwide "Thirty Years' War." The Spring 2002 efforts by the United States, Russia, and China to prevent a nuclear war between India and Pakistan have succeeded so far, but the situation in the Subcontinent remains fragile. One new act of irregular warfare could put the region back on a short fuse to war; while nearby, in Afghanistan, American military forces are being drawn ever deeper into a quagmire, ill-prepared to wage mountain warfare, against "Afghansi" irregular warfare forces, who themselves were first promoted by the United States, Great Britain, France, and Israel, to wage precisely the same kind of war against the Soviet Red Army, from 1979-89.

As the result of the Bush Administration's failure, to date, to deal with the Israeli "breakaway ally" regime of Ariel Sharon, the entire Middle East now stands poised on the verge of a regional war. Sharon has been systematically setting the military preconditions for an attempted mass expulsion of the 3.5 million Palestinians living in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, across the Jordan River, into Jordan, under his long-standing "final solution," that "Jordan is Palestine." Should the Bush Administration adopt the folly of a "regime change" in Iraq, Sharon would seize that opportunity to launch his mass transfer operation. As the result, the entire Middle East would explode in war, and that war would serve as a trigger for a global "Clash of Civilizations" conflict that, like the Thirty Years' War of 1618-48, would take generations to end.

President George W. Bush's June 24 Rose Garden speech, purporting to present his "vision" of Middle East peace, only served to accelerate the drive toward Sharon's mass transfer, by repudiating Yasser Arafat's leadership of the Palestinian people, and providing Sharon, effectively, with a green light to kill Arafat.

Were such a chain of events to occur, the first nation to be destroyed would be Israel itself. Thus, the Masada Complex-driven psychotic, Ariel Sharon, has singled himself out as the world's leading suicide bomber.

In Ibero-America, the rapidly spreading financial crash, a reflection of the global systemic collapse, not some regional "contagion," is compounded by a broad-based narco-insurgency, which has engulfed Colombia, is resurfacing in Peru (with the complicity of the Alejandro Toledo government), and has the active support of the Jacobin regime of Hugo Chávez in Venezuela. In Brazil's elections in October, a victory by the Workers Party's Luís Inácio "Lula" da Silva would bring Jacobin rule to the largest nation in South America, sending the entire continent into chaos, sufficient to also trigger a Mexico crisis, with immediate implications for the United States and Canada.

These narco-insurgencies have, in the recent past, enjoyed the open support of leading Wall Street circles, who are ever more desperate to get their hands on the trillions of dollars in revenue generated from the underground sales of drugs, weapons, and other contraband. Typical of this support, was the June 1999 meeting between a leader of the narcoterrorist Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) in its “demilitarized zone” and New York Stock Exchange Chairman Richard Grasso, as well as the tens of millions of dollars that mega-hedge-fund manager George Soros pours annually into the drug legalization movement, at the very same moment he unleashes speculative attacks on the sovereign currencies of Ibero-America. Under the terms of President George W. Bush’s “war on terrorism,” these actions by Wall Street’s Grasso and Soros place them in the category of “enemy combatants”; however, both men enjoy the open support of leading factions within the Bush Administration.

The prospects of financial catastrophe and war are immediately on the horizon. Yet, recent statements by U.S. Treasury Secretary Paul O’Neill confirm, that most members of the Bush Administration are willfully oblivious to this looming crisis. It is a certainty that President Bush does not grasp the momentous events now unfolding. Nor is he prepared to handle the awesome responsibilities he will face, perhaps as early as Autumn of this year.

The inexperience and other weaknesses of President Bush are gravely compounded by the presence, inside the Bush Administration, of a large “fifth column” of operators, affiliated with the Sharon/Jabotinskyite faction in Israel, with the allied neo-conservative American political networks, and with the Christian Zionist circles associated with Pat Robertson, Jerry Falwell, Gary Bauer, Ed McAteer and others.

President Bush also faces an insurgency from within the U.S. Congress, on both sides of the aisle, led by the alliance between organized-crime-tainted Republican Sen. John McCain (Ariz.) and the Hollywood-owned Democratic Sen. Joseph Lieberman (Conn.). The insurgency aims to steer the President into precisely the military adventures that the utopian promoters of a “Clash of Civilizations” war so desperately seek, and which the Wall Street and City of London financiers so desperately need, to maintain political power as their financial and monetary system nears the final crash.

The bulk of this EIR strategic study will deal with these networks of utopians inside the Bush Administration, inside the Congress, and inside key think-tanks in the ambit of the Washington Beltway, which are openly promoting imperial wars on every continent, and which are out to destroy some of America’s most enduring international partnerships, starting with the 60-year alliance with Saudi Arabia. But, before providing these dossiers, it is necessary to provide some background to the present utopian strategy of provoking religious and other forms of irregular warfare throughout the planet.

Bush's Enemies Have an Agenda

While President Bush, and even many of his more experienced senior policy aides, are grossly unprepared for the looming Summer-Autumn crisis, his utopian adversaries are ready. Indeed, they are operating from a longstanding, insane policy agenda, which dates back more than a quarter-century, to the period when Henry A. Kissinger was the de facto President of the United States, during the nominal terms of Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford. At that time, Kissinger promulgated a new U.S. national security policy, set forward in National Security Study Memorandum 200 (NSSM-200), "Implications of Worldwide Population Growth for U.S. Security and Overseas Interests." The final report was issued to the President on Dec. 10, 1974, for his signature, but was not declassified until July 3, 1989, a decade after it was supposed to have been made public.

The essence of NSSM-200 was that technology-intensive industrialization and population growth in the developing world represent a grave national security threat to the United States, because countries with growing populations and expanding agro-industrial economies would use up the strategic raw materials, which Kissinger and company deemed the indispensable property of the United States. NSSM-200 effectively condemned the entire developing world to permanent poverty, disease, manipulated civil, ethnic, and religious wars, aimed at population reduction, and sought to erect a post-modern imperialism, centered around private raw materials looting cartels, modelled on the British East India Company.

Although the report's language was carefully crafted, to obscure the genocidal implications of the underlying security doctrine, a few passages from the official text suffice to confirm the essence of the Kissinger doctrine:

"The important potential linkage between rapid population growth and minerals availability is indirect rather than direct. It flows from the negative effects of excessive population growth in economic development and social progress, and therefore on internal stability, in overcrowded underdeveloped countries. The United States has become increasingly dependent on mineral imports from developing countries in recent decades, and this trend is likely to continue. The location of known reserves of higher-grade ores of most minerals favors increasing dependence of all industrialized regions on imports from less developed countries. The real problems of mineral supplies lie, not in basic physical sufficiency, but in the politico-economic issues of access, terms for exploration and exploitation, and division of the benefits among producers, consumers, and host country governments.

"In the extreme cases where population pressures lead to endemic famine, food riots, and breakdown of social order, those conditions are scarcely conducive to systematic exploration for mineral deposits or the long-term investments required for their exploitation. Short of famine, unless some minimum of popular aspirations for material improvement can be satisfied, and unless the terms of access and exploitation persuade governments and peoples that this aspect of the international economic order has 'something in it for them,' concessions to foreign companies are likely to be expropriated or subjected to arbitrary intervention. Whether through government action, labor conflicts, sabotage, or civil disturbances, the smooth flow of needed materials will be jeopardized. Although population pressure is obviously not the only factor involved, these types of frustrations are much less likely under conditions of slow or zero population growth.”

NSSM-200 singled out 13 countries as the highest-priority targets for drastic population control, stating, bluntly: “Assistance for population moderation should give primary emphasis to the largest and fastest-growing developing countries where there is special U.S. political and strategic interest. Those countries are: India, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Nigeria, Mexico, Indonesia, Brazil, the Philippines, Thailand, Egypt, Turkey, Ethiopia, and Colombia.”

1960s Paradigm Shift

The revival of Malthusian genocide was by no means initiated with the NSSM-200 report of the Kissinger National Security Council. Rather, the report consolidated a policy coup inside the United States Executive branch, that was begun with the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, and which reflected a cultural “paradigm shift” within the advanced sector as a whole.

Already, beginning in 1965, with the publication of the Organization for Economic Development and Cooperation (OECD) report on education, authored by NATO official Dr. Alexander King, the call for drastic population reduction and the takedown of modern scientific education was placed on the table.

The 1961 launching of the World Wildlife Fund, by Britain’s Royal Consort, Prince Philip, also signalled the Anglo-American oligarchy’s newest initiative, to promote large-scale population destruction, targetting the darker-skinned peoples of the developing world. Dr. King had put it succinctly in an interview he gave to EIR on May 21, 1981: “There will be all these troubles, invasions, migrations. Look at the number of foreigners already. The United Kingdom is no longer a white country. And even at the present rate, the white race is finished.”

Dr. King shared the worldview of Prince Philip, who declared himself in favor of wiping out 80% of the human race over the next three generations, for the sake of retaining power in the hands of the Anglo-Saxon oligarchy, under a new global feudal order.

Lord Bertrand Russell, whom Lyndon LaRouche has named the most evil figure of the 20th Century, made the case for bringing into being such a Dark Age, a decade before Prince Philip launched his WWF, in his 1951 book, The Impact of Science on Society, where he wrote: “At present the population of the world is increasing at about 50,000 per diem. War, so far, has had no very great effect on this increase, which continued throughout each of the world wars. . . . But perhaps bacteriological war may prove effective. If a Black Death could spread throughout the world once in every generation, survivors could procreate freely without making the world too full. The state of affairs might be unpleasant, but what of it?”

These murderous Malthusian ideas were promoted on a mass scale among a drug-rock-sex counterculture-wrecked Baby Boomer generation in the early 1970s, through such outfits as the Club of Rome, founded by Aurelio Peccei, the protégé of NATO official Dr. Alexander King. It was against the backdrop of this campaign, that Kissinger was able to foster the same evil, and scientifically fraudulent, doctrine of “negative population growth,” as the official national security policy of the United States under NSSM-200.

Kissinger was followed at the top White House National Security post in 1977 by Zbigniew Brzezinski, who, like Kissinger, was a Harvard protégé of Dr. William Yandell Elliott, an avid promoter of H.G. Wells’ Open Conspiracy for an Anglo-American zero-growth global empire. Brzezinski’s contributions to the drive for this new British Empire included: the promotion of Global 2000, a reiteration of Kissinger’s NSSM-200 by the Jimmy Carter Administration; his embrace of Dr. Bernard Lewis’ promotion of irrationalist, nominally Muslim fundamentalist cults, as part of the “Crescent of Crisis” destabilization of the Middle East and Central Asia; and the Carter-era Federal Reserve policy of “controlled disintegration of the world economy,” through Chairman Paul Volker’s high interest rates and financial market deregulation.

Twenty-five years of these policies have brought the planet to the present moment, where we are weeks or months away from the biggest financial and monetary crash in modern history. And the architects of that disaster, who are themselves incapable of comprehending or stopping the catastrophe, will now proceed to ignite the Thirty Years’ War, which they have been promoting in the name of “zero growth,” for the past 35 years—unless they are stopped.

In the dossier that follows, EIR identifies some of the key players inside the Bush Administration, who are wittingly promoting this near-term agenda of war and chaos.
